Introduction

This is the first issue of the W.C.G Research Bulletin comprising reports by six of the members of the Waukegan Contact Group. We sincerely hope that you find in this bulletin, the satisfaction and understanding that we have acquired in our search for more and better information on some of the most important and immediate subjects that have confronted this world for quite some time. We are not interested in persuading individuals to believe in these things or to conform to them because of a lack of study on the readers part. Conforming to certain set beliefs and ideals reminds us of orthodoxism, a state of mind that we are earnestly against.

Instead of conforming or blindly accepting the information printed herein, we would appreciate it greatly if you kept this information in mind while searching for the facts in your own individual manner. The only true way that you will ever come to know certain things, is by the facts that you yourself have gathered and compiled.

If the words in this bulletin surprise you as being profoundly sensible and sane, then we would like you to realize that we are not teaching or giving you this knowledge. We are merely bringing about an awareness in you and the words that are printed in this bulletin are simply awakening certain persons to what they already knew but did not realize. Just as the hidden senses in the human mind, so are these facts, lying dormant, awaiting rejuvenation or reawakening. If you believe the information that we are presenting, we are merely activating an awareness in you.

Orthodoxism and dogma will never appear in this bulletin unless recognized as such in print. We do not believe in the too-well practised form of "education" that demands complete agreement to a particular study because nothing else has been discovered or widely recognized that would tend to contradict the present system of facts. We will present information and findings that explore some entirely different concepts in regard to many of the forthright situations now present on our little globe.

In one of the recent contacts made with a being not of this earth, the statement was made that the "New Age" was now on the horizon. One interpretation of this profound sentence is that we are now in the "New Age". If this statement is true and the space-man authentic and not trying to make himself famous by "pulling our leg", then the question of "what is the 'New Age' " would certainly be an important one and the answer even more important.

We shall go into many of the ideals and conceptions that we have compiled during these last few years and present them to the reader in the best order we know. Certainly one of the most important aspects of an impending "New Age" would be the relation of a new conception of a god or creative entity and our present beliefs. If we are being visited by beings from outer space or, another planet, what would they believe as compared to the religions and cults on this globe which number somewhere in the three hundreds? Would they believe in only one god or a myriad of false idols? Would they believe in the same god we believe in? This is certainly an interesting study and we have a specialized field of research dealing expressly with this subject, it is called "Truth Conceptions", the relation of Universal Truth and religion.

In this way, several other fields have been selected as important and significant in the light of the dawning "New Age". "Communications" deals with the contacts that have and will be made by individuals and groups throughout the world. It will include information on how to form a contact group and how to establish contact with space craft visiting our home plant. "Radiations" is the field dealing with the effect of nuclear experimentation on the human race, in past years and in the future. This subject has been radically censored and the W. C. G. Research Bulletin is the first publication having a reserved field expressly for findings about this subject. "World Of Madmen", a field that is immensly controversial to say the least. It deals with the present state of our modern world. "Mental Control" is the study of the hidden senses and powers. The information on this subject is rather extensive but requires much time and effort to sort the proper and recommended information in the necessary manner. "Future Health Conceptions" is a "new" approach to health. It is the exploration of universal healing forces in relation to The Human Struction. The Open Topic includes diverse subjects dealing with related phenomena that is not covered by the main fields of research. This study includes such subjects as cats, color, sound, the human aura, rebellion, and many other related subjects. Sightings will include important and significant reports of space craft that will be of interest in the investigation of this mystery. Our book service is the listing and stocking of recommended "Flying Saucer" books. These may be acquired at the headquarters of the Waukegan Contact Group.

If any of our readers have newspaper clippings, photographs, or any form of information or its source, we would appreciate hearing from you. Some of the subjects that we have mentioned herein are very difficult studies because of the fact that detailed information is usually very hard to find. Those who are willing to donate this information will certainly be helping us in our work and helping also in the publication of material that may well aid in the dawning of the "New Age".

We sincerely hope that you enjoy this bulletin and we immensely appreciate the wonderful enthusiasm we have received during its preparation.

Future Health Conceptions

by F. M. Castator

The field of Future Health Conceptions is the study of health and physical fitness as related to the coming "New Age". As it is felt that the human structure is an abode of life which should receive the utmost of regulated care and exercise, we have chosen it as one of the fields of our group.

This column will not only deal with keeping the body in its top physical condition and fitness but also with some very fascinating newly rediscovered methods of healing and curing. These are the methods and devices which certain medical associations are withholding for it seems that the hospital, clinics, research foundations, schools, colleges and the like are doing too well to have this system simplified or merely accelerated a few years.

If a doctor or medical man has spent a good portion of his life in training and studying, constantly working for the long-dreamed-of degree, he is by no means willing to give this up because of any new methods which would inevitably put him out of business. The medical associations which hold a great amount of weight in many phases of our land would especially try to stop this new method.

In the bible, it frequently refers to Christ healing the sick and even the dead by a method that if utilized today, would completely revolutionize the world of science. Several times he healed the sick and suffering in a matter of a few minutes or even a few seconds. Of course, we say that Christ was a great entity, a miraculous savior, and a living god. That he was, but it was also stated that the "miracles" that he at that time performed before the multitudes, we will some day accomplish as well and even better. So it is easy to see that if such a healing process were devised, it would meet with severe opinions from the medical associations throughout.

The best way of posessing a physical body that is in good working order is, of course, to keep it from getting undernourished or injured. We will also go into the means of doing this in regard to various health conceptions that we feel you will agree are indeed "New Age" in their scope. Color therapy is fast growing to a state of public recognition and the inportance of color in relation to our general well being is at last being recognized, although this recognition is a very slow process which is the path any advanced type of thinking seems to take. Some very interesting experiments have been accomplished in regard to color therapy and we will present some of the findings on this subject.

Music therapy is now recognized to a great extent and is being used in many institutions throughout the world. The importance of musical sounds and rythms on the human structure is indeed characteristic and will be given considerable study in this bulletin.

Healing of the mind and the body has been accomplished to some degrees through the use of hypnotism. This is really an interesting field of study and it has a direct relationship to Future Health Conceptions. People who have experienced hypnosis have been overcome by a feeling of grandeur which is very pleasant indeed. We will recommend various books and other sources of information which deal with the relation of healing to hypnosis in future articles.

Radiation, being one of the world's greatest problems today, will be given considerable thought in these articles as the overall effects of radiation on certain foods which we daily devour are certainly aiding in the general breakdown of certain body tissues that are now contributing greatly to the rise of "heart attacks".

It is not the purpose of these articles to bring down or scoff at any particular organization or association, but rather to reveal certain prevalent facts that we feel the public should be informed about for their own good.

World wide contamination of certain foods is certainly a subject that should not be treated lightly, but rather with the determination to present the facts that are behind some of these things and that are now endangering the very existence of the human race. It is in the knowledge of the Truth that we will truly be free, not only from any social, religious, or racial bounds, but also from the fear and depressions which go hand-in-hand with illnesses of the human body.

It is with this in mind that the future series of Future Health Conceptions will be presented in this bulletin.

COMMUNICATIONS

Charles Belensky — W9RVX

One of the chief objectives of any contact group is to actually establish some form of communication with our visitors from outer space. There are many ways of doing this, and I will try to describe the methods used by our group. I myself, am an amateur radio operator, and I would suggest to anyone starting a contact group to try to get some radio operator, (HAM), who is interested in saucers. Have him write to A. David Middleton, W5CA, in Tijeras, New Mexico to secure additional information regarding amateur radio nets etc.

Our group has attempted contact by two methods. One is by radio-telegraph "CW", the other, using light beam communications. We have not made too many attempts as yet, but we will keep trying on a regular schedule. One evening a week at each method seemed to us sufficient. Any group would have to have a licensed "HAM" operator to attempt communications via radio, and even then there are many restrictions.

For more information on radio contacts I would suggest reading "The Saucers Speak", a documentary report of interstellar communications by George H. Williamson and Alfred C. Bailey. This book tells of actual radio-telegraph communications by them and others with saucers in August of 1952. It is very interesting reading. According to the book, the frequency which our "friends" in the saucers used to send on was usually around 400 Kcs. In one place they mentioned 40 meters as a frequency for us to send on. As far as I know, there is no certain frequency on which to send and be assured of a reply.

This talk of radio communications may discourage some, but that leads me into our second method of communication, light beams. Light beams have many distinct advantages over radio. You don't need any license whatsoever to operate the equipment. This should be a relief to anyone interested in this work that doesn't hold an FCC license. Another advantage is that all communications are strictly two-way, whereas with radio, anyone having a short-wave receiver is able to monitor your transmissions. The unit is comparatively simple, therefore the price is not prohibitive. Depending on the type of unit built, including transmitter and receiver with all parts new, I would say that the cost could be kept under $30.

used to automatically open doors at supermarkets etc.) connected with a two-tube amplifier. This is all run off of batteries in order to make it completely portable. Anyone with some electronic experience should be able to build one without too much difficulty.

There are quite a few circuits that could be used, as anyone doing a little research on the subject will find out. Most radio and electronic magazines have had articles on them for different purposes at various times. The quarterly publication "Saucers" has also had a few plans. The one I finally chose, though, was one appearing in "Popular Electronics" of June, 1955. All items in this unit are easily obtainable through any radio mail order house. This unit takes advantage of "printed circuit" components, which greatly simplifies building. It also uses a concave mirror principle which adds much to its sensitivity. The only change I made was to use a 923 photo-tube instead of a 930. The 923 is sensitive also to infra-red and ultra-violet.

While still on the subject, I would suggest to anyone building any type of light beam receiver to read the article in "Popular Electronics", and use their concave mirror principle as it will multiply the unit's sensitivity greatly. To give a short description, a concave mirror (a shaving mirror of the type that magnifies can be used) is pointed at the sky, or the object from which the light is being emitted, and then in turn focused on the photo-electric tube. The principle is about the same as that of a reflecting telescope.

There is supposedly an accompanying penetrating beam along with infra-red, and with this in mind, many interesting experiments could be conducted by interested individuals.

More advantages of light beam communication are that the units are light, compact, and need no antenna such as a radio transmitter would.

The light beam transmitter is even simpler than the receiver. All it consists of is a portable, hand-held, sealed-beam, 6 volt spotlight, two 6 volt batteries, a 3ohm-10 watt resistor, and a carbon microphone. There are many good spot lights on the market such as the "Radar Light" and "Big Beam", to list a couple. Usually wherever you find an article on light beam receivers you will also find a description of a transmitter. The article in "Popular Electronics" is no exception as it gives plans for one that is even a little simpler than the one that I described. All they do is connect two 6 volt batteries in series (or use a 12 volt battery) and then connect the microphone and spotlight in series with that.

For those of you who don't really understand how communication by light beams would work, I will try to explain. As you talk into the microphone, your voice will cause the spotlight to flicker. These variations are then picked up on the face of the photo-tube which is right in the path of light. The photo-tube will then change this light into electrical impulses. These impulses are very weak, so they are then fed to the two amplifier tubes and the voice reproduction circuitry. The end result is that you hear, through earphones, exactly what was spoken into the microphone with no mechanical connection between the transmitter and the receiver. It is the same principle as radio, except that your voice is carried by the light beam instead of radio waves.

This information should, I hope, stir some interest in this very interesting field. As you probably have gathered, this type of communication has many possibilities.

Record everything you hear, if you make contact, if it is humanly possible. Recordings are much better evidence than the spoken word. Tape recorders seem to do the job quite well. You will probably run into some difficulties there though. Most tape recorders have to be run off of 110 volts AC, and it can be difficult to obtain this and still remain portable. There are three alternatives: 1. Try to make contact near an electrical outlet and use an extension cord, 2. Obtain a vibra-pack which attaches to your car battery and will produce 110 volts AC (this is quite a draw on the battery though), or 3. Obtain a small battery-operated tape or wire recorder. Use whichever method fits your situation. The small battery-operated wire recorder is ideal, but the one drawback is the price. They average around $300.00.

When attempting contact it is also advisable to have along a portable radio, and leave it tuned to one frequency. In some cases light beam may work better than radio and vice-versa.

We will continue to use both radio and light in our attempts, and I will list our progress in the next communications article in this publication.

THE WORLD OF MADMEN

by Frank J. Papp

Your first reaction might well be: "Well, what's this got to do with flying saucers?"

Well, I'll tell you friend, this has everything to do with flying saucers and if you have any intelligence at all, you will no doubt see why.

This deals with the matters at hand. This is for those people who would like to know about the world of today and why it is so. For you who insist on watching the skies and waiting for heaven to topple into your laps I would recommend reading something else.

In order to construct and apply reasoning to problems of today, one must understand and know the over all picture of events. It is of dire necessity that you be familiar with cause and effect. Specific terminology is excessively confusing, so, I shall deal with cause and effect generally.

The world of today, and for that matter of yesterday, has been and will continue to be in miserable chaos. The characteristics of greed and power have consumed the major portion of rulers brains and propaganda feeding has been common practice among controllers to influence the populace into conforming.

Unfortunatly the church has faded from the true light and evolved into a commercial big business structure which, in many incidents, fails to abide by its own convictions and laws of nature.

It seems that SUPERMAN, I LOVE LUCY and SENATOR JOE McCARTHY and a host of other sidetracking elements have replaced the desire for intelligent discussions.

The school has taught people that George Washington chopped down a cherry tree and was noble enough to tell the truth. Populace has again created an idol.

The smiling politician is still smiling and continuing to do nothing to aid the slum living condition of holy America. (among a multitude of other evils).

The businessman continues to legally rape the public.

Americans are led to believe they are the saviors of all mankind. What are they going to save mankind from? This often amuses me. From what? Slavery? Look at the segregation down south. View the slums of Chicago. Walk down Market street in my own home of Waukegan.

This is refined slavery.

Are they going to assure mankind security? Whatever that is.

What I am interested in learning is this: Just what is America going to save all these people from?

Americans aren't Gods or saints.

Inside the shores of America people are still starving. Crime is better than ever. Women are continually being raped. Sex is still an evil thought. Free world is taken too literally. Food is stored and spoiled, then discarded. Social class is and always was here (although Americans are told that here on this golden soil there is no such thing). Freedom of speech and press is amplified to a degree of nonsense.

America is a great country.

All the countries are wonderful.

Except they're all run a little stupid. Social systems are faulty and constructed from an evil slant rather than a good slant. This dog eat dog society is insane. It breeds crime, poverty, disease and war. It will continue to do so until either it is abandoned or destroyed by violence (which could be revolution or another, God forbid, world war).

It is high time that American people start thinking first and then accepting.

I sincerely hope that this column can be enlarged and brought forth to a greater degree. Your comments, either positive or negative, will help the future of this column. Any questions you may have pertaining to the contents of MADMEN are cordially welcome and should be addressed to me, in care of this bulletin.

Next month, SOCIAL SYSTEMS, which is the crux of our failing little world.

Good thinking.

TRUTH CONCEPTIONS

by James Roepenack

Being a part of a group such as the Waukegan Contact Group instills within one the feeling that there is more to this organizing than just taking a few subjects of interest and explaining them with facts on hand and personal opinions.

You know that there are others who share your thoughts, principles, ideals and who give proof of conviction of Universal Truth.

As we all had the same thought concerning our forming the group, we felt that the knowledge and wisdom we derived from our findings in our search for truth perceptions was significant enough to be brought to a brighter light.

I hope that my explanations concerning this subject are explicit, this being my first literary attempt!

The purpose of this so called literary attempt is to try to bring to you the understanding of Universal Law, the purpose of Universal Law and its application.

There are numerous excellent books out concerning Universal Law but most conspicuous of late are the books involving people of other planets. These people and their philosophy of Universal Law and how we of this Earth are involved in the infinite scheme of the Universe and their urgent message for us to be united to live in Harmony, is indeed thought provoking!

To get back to an explanation concerning the topic of my field.

We shall start with Religion and its relationship to Universal Law. As most people know Religion means a system of faith or a conscientious devotion to a principle or ideal.

This system of faith is widely practiced today as we have over 300 different modes of religion.

One wonders why this is so? Did our creator mean for His teachings to have different faiths each with their own version of worship?

From the way Man has taught them you would think so!

Our present way of life is an Orthodox way. Especially with Religion! This Orthodox method of teaching Religion blinds Man to the real Truth and what it implies.

If man is to become aware of his real self, he must forever keep an open mind and constantly search for truth.

Religion is one of Mans expressions in the eternal progress for truth on this world and others. Material Science is another - this Science Man has made the most progress in.

Social Science also plays a vast role in the divine scheme.

What Man seems to lack in the understanding of this infinite Universe is that complete Harmony has to be and not divided attention.

The present method of teaching the three Sciences lacks in complete understanding simply because they are individualized. This in itself is a reverse act in the divine plan!

Universal Law teaches that there is no separate Science, each is dependent on the other, therefore they are one!

One excellent version of Universal Law is explained by our Brothers from other worlds in Daniel Fry's book "Alans Message To Men Of Earth."

It is rather hard for an individual to break away from Orthodoxy. Especially when the whole of his life has been devoted to the principles of Orthodoxy.

But sooner or later we as individuals have to become aware of our most inner thoughts and bring them forth.

Religion as it is taught today, has the basic principles of truth inherent within but it is all hidden behind the complexities Man has put on it. Take the complexities away from Religion and a much clearer picture is obtained.

I hope that some understanding has been made of Universal Law and its Relationship to Religion in this issue.

In forthcoming statements or issues Universal Law and everything that is dependent to it shall be discussed as explicitly as possible.

We have the Golden Rules. Apply them and you will understand Universal Law.

Until next time — see you friend!

MENTAL CONTROL

by Timothy Wilson

The research field of Mental Control is a highly controversial and fascinating study to say the least. In this publication, Mental Control will deal with the rejuvenation or reawakening of the "hidden" senses and powers that are lying dormant in each human structure.

Almost everyone, at one time or another, has experienced a very strange and peculiar situation which could certainly be attributed to some premature mental power. Perhaps you called someone on the telephone and at the very same time he was at the reverse end trying to get in touch with you. Of course, if this happens once or twice, it is certainly anything but conclusive of the fact that telepathy exists. But if this is a recurrent happening, we begin to wonder. Why would a friend call at the precise time that you were trying to do likewise. This is very frustrating and there is no conclusive or satisfying orthodox explanation. However, if we were to look at this incident with the possibility of telepathy in the foreground, this and other equally baffling instances can easily be accounted for.

People are frequently misplacing articles that they soon be needing. The first reaction is usually temper because of a lack of memory in relation to where the article may be. Then the individual rushes madly about trying desperately to locate the stray item. After a few minutes of this and the person is very near to a state of exhaustion. In a semi-coma the individual may perhaps meditate on where the lost article may be, this is the process he should have originally used. In a large percentage of the cases, the individual will receive a mental picture of the whereabouts of the item which is the obvious cause for his present state of immobility. After a fairly acceptable recovery, the individual staggers forth to jostilly confirm his precognitive vision. Not really believing in the possibility of finding the item by using such an unorthodox method but rather to make jest of its utter failure he nears the place which was shown in his vision and finds the article!

If you jotted down on a piece of paper each incident as it happens you would find that the total numbers in the innumerable. Of course, the average person takes as much note of these cases as one does the passage of an airplane. It was merely the passing of an airplane, and to blazes with the force behind its motivation, who cares about the intelligence that was behind its ultimate creation, it is merely the passage that we are interested in. But these people do not stop to realize that the actual passage or the incidents are actually secondary when compared to the ultimate nature of these events!

It is not at all an uncommon event that represents one of the most mystifying phases of mental powers, that of an individual awakening in the midpoint of their slumber and vocally recall a dream so vivid and real that one would think to take a more serious look at this phenomena of dreams next time. There are actual case histories of individuals awakening in the night knowing that something is about to, has just, or will be happening. In most of these cases the individuals present at the time are dumbfounded to find that the event actually did occur! These nocturnal predictions are most interesting and we shall certainly consider them seriously in the future.

Telepathy, being the basic conception in this astounding study, is the first item with which we will deal. So I shall first discuss telepathy, and then branch out into the aspects of telepathy, such as clairvoyance, which is the power to see into hidden things or being capable to learn of unknown facts. Surely the reader has had the experience to simply "know" certain things that the individual is sure he hasn't run into before. He may not have studied them, read about them, or heard lectures on these facts, but they merely come to him—from within! Although this is highly unorthodox, we shall present articles on this method of "education", this is because we, the staff of this bulletin thrive on the aspects of life which are unorthodox.

Another objective of my future articles will be to delve into premonition, the history of telepathy, and some of the present-day advancements made in the study and research of extra sensory perception. I shall also suggest certain tests designed to bring out telepathic and other such attributes and to help determine which ones are predominant in the individual. These tests will be of many different types, such as color tests, and will include tests with dice and cards. Tests dealing with rhythm and time will also be experimented with. These tests will contribute greatly to the ultimate understanding of telepathy and kindred phenomena.

I shall also touch on the possibility of an extra sensory organ which is directly related to telepathic powers and which can be brought out and promoted in various ways.

In the human mind there are innumerable hidden senses and powers that can only be brought about or reactivated by the individual's awareness of them. It seems that the more the individual believes in these powers the more they are expressed in various ways. This is all done in the hope that these articles will strike a long dead flint in a cranial sanctuary and the true nature of its own being fully realized and understood. This—is Mental Control.

The OPEN TOPIC

The Open Topic will deal with diverse subjects that are not covered by the main fields of research. Several subjects that are related to the "New Age" are not included in the twelve major fields so it was decided that the W.C.G. Research Bulletin would have a special reserved portion of each publication to reveal certain findings by various individuals of the Waukegan Contact Group.

In this column, we will present information on the following subjects and many more; Cats, (these are recognized to be very strange animals indeed. There is considerable evidence to point to the fact that the first colony of cats were brought from another planet!) Color, (there has been a great deal of speculation in regard to the everyday phenomena of color. What exactly is color and how does it influence our lives in various ways?) Sound, (this is related to color and is just as mystifying. In our limited spectrum we are able to perceive of only an infinitesimally small portion of all the colors that are around us constantly. An individual in another spectrum would be invisible to us. Sound has an important part in the mystery of color and related subjects.) The Human Aura, (this is a subject that is fascinating to say the least! Everyone of us is constantly surrounded with a radiating "field" that measures approximately two inches. What is the aura and how does it influence our lives and others?) Rebellion, (a very good example of rebellion in our present day world is juvenile delinquency. Individuals who are in a state of constant rebellion against certain phases of their environment. "Rebel without a (seeming) cause" will be our first article on this subject.)

These are just a few of the many subjects that will be covered in this column. We will also do research on various subjects sent to us by our readers. In this way, the individual will have free research done on a mystifying subject that he or she may have been wondering about for quite some time.

For the general betterment of our publication and the widening of our scopes, the Open Topic has been promoted. The diverse subjects presented herein will be factual and are for the purpose of giving out information that is not covered by the general research fields. We are awaiting your suggestions for a research topic for a forthcoming W. C. G. Research Bulletin.

SIGHTINGS

We have hitherto pointed out that this is not a "saucer" magazine. It is a research bulletin disclosing the findings of the various members of the Waukegan Contact Group. However, we do have a reserved portion of this bulletin expressly for the purpose of relating the sightings of individuals and groups that we feel are significant in relation to our main research fields.

The staff of the Waukegan Contact Group feel that the authenticity of the "modern" phenomena of "Flying Saucers" has adequately proven itself. Therefore we are not interested in striving to present sightings of space craft and other observations unless they relate to our researches. For example: several people receive a very strange "tingling" sensation when a space craft is near or when they are watching one. What is this "tingling" sensation and what is its cause? At certain times, persons have reported sighting a space craft that gave out a strange noise quite unlike anything they had ever heard before. We shall go into the reasons for these noises and their effect on the individuals that have heard them.

Several times during a mass sighting of a fleet of "saucers" or even single craft, the witnesses, several of them equipped with cameras, have completely failed to make use of these photographic mechanisms. It would seem that these individuals were completely spellbound and did not even think about snapping a picture, much to his or her regret later on. Several members of this staff have made many wonderful and intriging sightings of space craft, and yet with movie and camera equipment within a short distance, have completely forgotten to make use of these devices.

On other occasions, persons would be strolling along on a clear night or broad daylight and suddenly "look up into the sky" where they would immediately and without hesitation spot a craft skimming along at an unimaginable speed. Why is it that these individuals just "happen" to look up at the precise time to catch the flight of contrivances that could only have been constructed and maneuvered by an extra-terrestrial source? In a forthcoming issue of the W. C.G. Research Bulletin we shall investigate these subjects and many others in the reserved column of Sightings.

RADIATIONS

by Mary Castator

The research field of Radiations is a big one, with many underlying themes to be interwoven into the topic's nucleus. It will be my task to delve into many aspects of a variety of sister subjects in regard to radiation.

The field of Radiations, as far as our research organization will be concerned, will deal mainly with the effects of nuclear explosions on the human race. This is our nucleus. From it we will branch out into topics closely related to the main subject matter.

Before one can hope to understand higher mathematics he must first master the basic principles or tools with which he will work. So it is with this field. A basic tool, the actual mechanics of the A-Bomb, the H-Bomb, and science's newest nuclear weapon the Cobalt Bomb, will be studied until a general knowledge is acquired to enable us to look deeper into the subject.

Our foundation, once established, will enable us to move on to still another theme. Accounts, gathered from newspaper files, dating back to August 6, 1945, the day set aside for the first Atomic Bomb explosion on Hiroshima, to the present period in history will be covered. We will seek together to clear up many of the fallacies engulfing Atomic Energy and the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombings by the first Atomic Bombs.

There are many sources to go to for material dealing with the possible danger of radiation on man's sexual relations. A topic as important as man's total extinction on earth is, I feel, worth noting seriously. It is entirely possible for the human race to become extinct simply by reducing or completely taking away man's sexual capabilities.

Articles have come to my attention on the possibility of mutations forming in children born of parents who have been exposed to large doses of radioactive particles, either by being in an area near a nuclear explosion or by, gradually over an extensive period of time, accumulate radioactive particles in their body's system. It is also believed by some that stillbirths may occur if the radiation count in the vicinity of the stillbirth is of an appreciable size. Whether this is just a theory without basis or a possible threat to humanity will be given considerable study in future articles.

One of the most extensive underlying themes is that of the part radiation plays in determining what the weather shall be. Over the past ten years, since that eventful day Hiroshima felt the wrath of the first Atomic Bomb, the weather has let forth its pent up fury. Floods, seen at their peak of destructive power, have covered great areas of our land, ever increasing in numbers. Hurricanes and tornadoes and even the mighty erruptions of long dead volcanoes have been again seen. Are we experiencing any of the effects left by the radiation of nuclear weapons now? We shall see.

I am a firm believer in giving the American public a chance to express their opinions on subjects of vital significance for all. It was with this in mind that I organized a survey, compiling the themes listed above. In the future I will reveal the findings, though not absolutely conclusive, of this survey.

Man seems to be in a perpetual state of fear and surrounds himself with worries, some large and some small. Living in this anxiety ridden atmosphere, he is forced, in order to survive he believes, to build firm structures to protect his material world. The bomb shelters, dotting our streets and cities, serve as good examples. The Civil Defense organizations throughout the world have devoted much time and effort for such edifices. We shall strive to see how firm these material structures are against the forces of radioactive dust particles.

In close relationship to this topic is that of just how far this radioactive dust can travel. Can it reach from the east to the west coast of the United States? Possibly even further? What is meant by fallout and how can we guard against it if we are faced with the danger?

Yes there is a great deal to be learned and a great deal of material to be read and re-read. Over our heads, however, is always the threat of another war with our "enemy" Russia. We hear of a "war to end all wars" being again used in connection with a third World War. We fear Russia, but if it is not Russia it is Red China, and if it is not Red China it is Korea. Coupled, hand in hand with this line of thinking is the theory, or is it fact, of what cities and Air Bases are on the Black List of Russia's to be destroyed when war comes.

We read charts where, in very simplified language, bright pictures and livid diagrams show us how easy it is for Russia to destroy us. They even practically tell us in how many minutes and seconds it will take. It gives us a firm seat to rest on, doesn't it? It will be a little hard to investigate all these charts but in the course of my articles I will try to bring you as many as possible.

This is but a brief and I mean very brief sketch of what will be forthcoming in future publications of the Waukegan Contact Group Research Bulletin. I am by no means professing to give you a complete picture of every item ever written in regard to my field of Radiations. I think that a little impossible but even if it were possible it would be quite long and I'm afraid a little tiring and very repetitious.

What I will attempt to do, however, is to orientate you to a new realm of thought. A realm of a possible danger and the part that you can play in averting this danger if it does exist. There will be many references made of men of renown in the various fields of science with the hope that you might care to do more detailed research beyond the point which I will present to you.

It is the purpose of my articles in my field of Radiations, as it is in every field in our research organization to keep you, the public, informed as to the past research in our areas and to bring you up to the very present moment. We will be learning along with you.

I wonder if man really realizes that every moment of his existence on this planet he breathes, eats, drinks radioactive molecules, plays in radioactive snow, gets drenched by radioactive rain, and accumulates these radioactive particles day by day until he well reaches beyond the danger signal.

This is my field, it is called Radiations.
