NOTE ABOUT THIS GUIDE

Dear Readers,

These resources have been compiled with hope they will help you navigate the overwhelming amount of information out there on the history and current reality of racism and structural inequality in the United States. This is by no means a complete list – there are even more resources and organizations for your consideration – but it’s a good place to begin. We recommend starting by choosing a few books to read, a few organizations to donate to (if you are able!), a few businesses to support, and then just keep going!! Learning to be anti-racist is a process and a lifelong journey, so we encourage you to breathe through the discomfort, set aside feelings of helplessness, and start doing the work. It’s important to remember that we (especially referring to White folks with stable jobs and significant networks) have more power and influence than we often realize.

Please remember that you can’t do everything at once (no matter how much you would like to!). You are urged to think about where you can have the most influence. Maybe you have friends and family members who could use some encouragement to learn and understand a little more. Maybe you are in a position at work where you can speak up more on issues of diversity in the workplace or challenge your company to make careful choices about business partners and investments (e.g., does your company support the prison industrial complex?). Maybe you are an educator and can work social justice and more nuanced (and accurate) history lessons into your curriculum. Maybe you are a parent and can raise your children to be aware of issues surrounding racial justice. Whatever “your lane” may be, remember to lead with empathy (especially while having difficult conversations), and to never stop learning!

Join us in doing this work, and together, we can make the world a little better.

In Solidarity,

Reflect

REFLECTION QUESTIONS**

- What is the racial makeup of who I interact with most?
- Do I prioritize surrounding myself with diversity? Why or why not?
- How does my country, town, and family view people of color?
- How important is race to me? Why?
- How much do I know about the historical context of race where I live?
- In what ways am I treated differently than those of a different race?
- In what ways am I privileged? How is my privilege related to my race?
- If I were to walk into a room of all people of color would I be scared?
- What would it be like to be a racial minority in my town, country, etc.?
- What stereotypes has society taught you to believe about Black people?
- What have you heard or seen that is overtly racist?
- What messages have your family and community taught you about Black people? Do you believe these are fair judgements of ALL Black people? Why or why not?
- Have you heard or seen anything that is subtly racist? If you have, what did you do? What would you do differently now?
- What stereotypes has society created about your race? How do you feel about it? What would it feel like to be stereotyped as a Black person?
- Have you heard about or seen any of your Black friends experience microaggressions?
- Do you have any Black friends? Why or why not?
- How will you now be anti-racist? Will you stand up to people you respect and love when they say or do something racist?

CONVERSATIONS TO HAVE**

- Do you support women, LGBTQIA+ individuals, and immigrants? Why or why not?
- How is the Black Lives Matter movement different or similar to others?
- Why do you support certain communities/groups/movements but not others?
